

Word can change your life

Often we throw words to the wind, we often forget their meanings. And values they bring with themselves, we do not appreciate. Words are everything and nothing, words offer the means to the meaning, and for those who will listen, the enunciation of truth. Artists were always using the way of telling the lies, to teach the verity. But the words are also destructive yet subtle form of murder. We can take someone's life or help them in creating new ones, we can hurt and heal.

The words are beautiful, the words are fatal. We form the band and build up moments. By creating art we're able to note that the correctness does not necessarily go hand in hand with the beauty of understanding, but always with the beauty of the message. Words can abduct us as a form of agreement, as the tone of the ideas or as the absolute power. There is no way to deny their uniqueness. For example, silence would not have its value, if not the words, which disturb its beauty.

Words give and receive hope, they create feelings or leave man alone, to drown in his own thoughts. Words are the wings of the mind. They float us into the heavens or become a burden making never-healing scars. Paradox chasing paradox. In view of the words we are so vulnerable. What can say somebody, who had been abandoned by words?
