

The most important things in life are for free

The world revolves around money. The media say that everything we want to, we can purchase in a shop. But is it true? Can we be happy in this dog-eat-dog world, where the only aim is to possess? I do not think so.

Firstly, the coin makes that we can afford to a lot of things which can help us to improve ourselves. We can go to the university or develop our passions, but very often money lead to catastrophe. We read in newspapers that those big, famous and spectacularly happy stars have addiction problems and depressions because of the lack of real friends and since the excess of money, that they spend on drugs and alcohol.

Money does not make people happy. Money does not buy you a true friend or genuine love. It is for free. You have to make strong efforts to gain it, but believe me, it is worth its price. People say that the most important things in their lives are family, love, respect to others and trust. As you can see these values are not for sale. If you have problems, close people will always help you, they will talk to you and will support you. They will understand you in contrast to money or alcohol.

While it is true that money can solve lots of problems, I firmly believe that it does not give you the best and it does not solve all of them. We have to remember that the most valuable things in life are for free.
