

A funny story

It was a fantastic sunny day. Birds were singing and you could smell the scent of trees in the air. My mum told me to mow the lawn. I wasn't very pleased with that, but I changed my clothes and pulled my socks up.

Firstly, I took all the things from the garage I needed: a mower, a rake and a wheelbarrow. I connected the cable to the contact and I was ready to begin. My work started. I had been mowing for a few quarters already, when suddenly something touched my leg. I screamed and turned around immediately.

Unfortunately, right behind me there was the rake and I stand on them. A long stick hit me in my forehead and I fell down. It wouldn't have been so embarrassing if my crush hadn't seen the whole situation. To my misfortune, he was just passing by. I thought I would burn with shame. He started laughing, but then he asked me if he could help me. I was so surprised and shocked that I agreed.

Later, I sat on the bench and stared with an open mouth at my rescuer. Holding a bag of ice on my forehead to remove a big red bump, I was thinking about this funny situation and wondering how crazy I was.
